Synopsis

Since late 2018, the federal government has expressed growing concerns about the effect of foreign influence on the integrity of research conducted in or for U.S. institutions. As a result of increased scrutiny, Federal funding agencies have issued new requirements and guidance, federal law enforcement agencies have increased activity, and there is renewed attention on export control compliance within the academic research community.

Join us at our next OSP Roundtable for a discussion of the impacts of this evolving landscape on research activities at Cornell. Attendees will learn about Cornell's commitment to global engagement, new proposal and award requirements from several federal sponsors, and best practices for proper disclosure to federal sponsors and to Cornell. In addition, we will review how researchers and research administrators can maintain compliance with federal export control laws through the discussion of how to handle proprietary information, ensure the proper screening of visitors, and responsibly engage in international travel.

Zoom

For those unable to join us in person, attendance will be available via Zoom.
A link to the Zoom meeting will be sent the day before the Roundtable.
Neither requests for the link nor registration are required.

Materials and Recordings

All OSP Roundtable materials and records are available on the Cornell Research Services website –
