Passcode: 2020

Since late 2018, the federal government has expressed growing concerns about the effect of foreign influence on the integrity of research conducted in or for U.S. institutions. As a result of increased scrutiny, federal funding agencies have issued new requirements and guidance, federal law enforcement agencies have increased activity, and there is renewed attention on export control compliance within the academic research community.

Join us for an interactive discussion of the impacts of this evolving landscape on research activities at Cornell. Attendees will learn about Cornell's commitment to:

- Global engagement
- New proposal and award requirements from several federal sponsors
- Best practices for proper disclosure to federal sponsors and to Cornell

In addition, we will review how researchers and research administrators can maintain compliance with federal export control laws through the discussion of how to:

- Handle proprietary information
- Ensure the proper screening of visitors
- Responsibly engage in international travel

Presenters:

Mary-Margaret Klempa, Director, Office of Sponsored Programs and Research Development (OSP)

Jamie Sprague, Sr. Grant & Contract Officer/Federal, Subaward, PRO Team Lead, OSP

Sarah Schlagter, Sr. Grant & Contract Officer/Export Controls Officer, OSP
